Building Descriptions and Climate Zones

APPENDIX D: Building Descriptions

The purpose of the Building Descriptions is to assist the user in selecting an appropriate type of building when using the Air Conditioning estimating tools. The selected building type should be the one that most closely matches the actual project. These summaries provide the user with the inputs for the typical buildings. Minor variations from these inputs will occur based on differences in building vintage and climate zone. The Building Descriptions are referenced from the 2004-2005 Database for Energy Efficiency Resources (DEER) Update Study. It should be noted that the user is required to provide certain inputs for the user's specific building (e.g. actual conditioned area, city, operating hours, economy cycle, new AC system and new AC system efficiency). The remaining inputs are approximations of the building and are deemed acceptable to the user. If none of the typical building models are determined to be a fair approximation then the user has the option to use the Custom Building approach. The Custom Building option instructs the user how to initiate the Engage Software. The Engage Software is a stand-alone, DOE2 based modeling program.

APPENDIX D: Climate Zones

The purpose of the Climate Zones section is to assist the user in selecting an appropriate California Climate Zone weather data set for weather related measures. The Climate Zone list is from the California Energy Commissions (CEC) website:
http://www.energy.ca.gov/maps/climate_zone_map.html.

The following pages are a listing of the climate zones associated with several thousand specific California cities, towns and other locations. This information represents an abridged version of the CEC publication California Climate Zone Descriptions, which contains detailed survey definitions of the sixteen climate zones.
